

Miss Lenore Ulric, now in the second year of her remarkable success, "Kiki," at the Belasco.

© STRAUSS-PEYTON

"The Fool's" Christmas Eve—James Kirkwood as Daniel Gilchrist on the altar of the church from which he has been dismissed—a stirring scene in Channing Pollock's play at the Times Square Theater.

Catherine Dale Owen, in "The Bootleggers," at the Thirty-ninth Street Theater.

The Lorraine Sisters, Edna and Della, featured dancers in George M. Cohan's musical comedy, "Little Nellie Kelly," at the Liberty.

Starring in "Johannes Kreisler"—Jacob Ben-Ami in the Selwyns' new production at the Apollo.

Miss Peggy Wood, in Henry W. Savage's new musical production, "The Clinging Vine," opening to-morrow night at the Knickerbocker.

Wallace Ford, Anne Bronaugh, Bernard Gorcev and Ida Kramer in a scene from "Abie's Irish Rose," at the Republic.

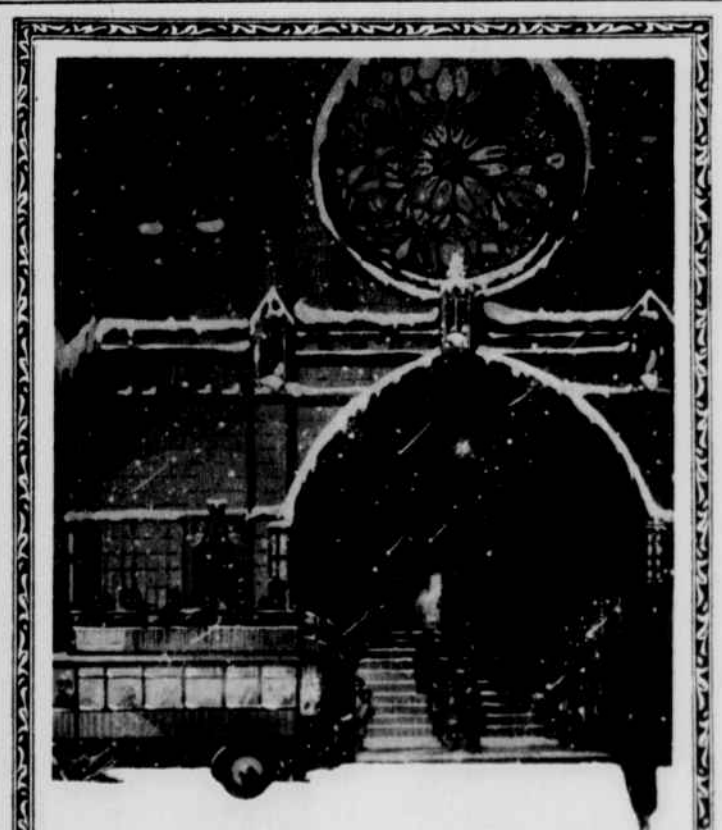

O. P. Heggie and Edwin Nicander in a scene from Molnar's comedy, "Fashions for Men," at the National.

Miss Fay Bainter, who will give New York its first glimpse of her new play, "The Lady Christilinda," to-morrow night at the Broadhurst.

Starring in "Secrets"—Miss Margaret Lawrence, who celebrates the holidays by appearing in her new play at the Fulton.

It is our hope that the gifts you are about to receive from Ovington's will add a little to the joy of Christmas Day.

OVINGTON'S
"The Gift Shop of Fifth Avenue"
FIFTH AVENUE AT 39TH STREET